THE ELLISON
SALE

This is not merely an announcement that has no significance; neither is it intended to be conducted along the worn out lines that characterize the average sale.

If you are interested, read along and understand the conditions which govern this unusual occurrence. Weather conditions, as you know, have been exceedingly unfavorable to the selling of certain lines of merchandise--our Summer is late in coming and the time is almost ripe to have our Fall stock under way.

We Would Prefer to Sell at a Sacrifice Rather Than To Carry Goods Through to Fall

Therefore, it becomes necessary to dispose of the present stock, and this can only be accomplished by a positive, true and genuine reduction in prices.

Let's see how we can assure a cutting of price, for this is one of the promises our house is going to keep.

Everything in Ellison's Store is Plainly Marked.

Every article is marked in plain figures. Not a ticket will be disturbed, not a figure changed upon the original ticket, except a plain figure noting clearly the reduction made upon the article, besides our guarantee, and our assurance is behind every transaction which might be undertaken.

This Is Not An Ordinary Sale!

And it will be wise to come and visit our store as once--go through--wait upon yourself, if you like, and assure yourself of the splendid reductions made throughout the stock. Our system of plain figures will quickly determine that goods are cut regardless of cost.

With This Positive, Sure and Certain Assurance

—on our part, it will be worth your while to see the tempting, beautiful and cheap array of merchandise which will go quickly, giving the public the benefit of such savings as we clearly demonstrate.

The goods offered in this sale are not shop-worn, damaged or unattractive, but they have style, character and quality, and every feature to make them desirable.

Talk it over among yourselves; then come together Saturday morning and assure yourselves of the genuineness of our promise.

You Aren't Going to Have an Opportunity Like This Again During The Year.

These prices obtain for Three Days Only--our object being to quickly reduce stock.

THE A. S. OF E. COLUMN

— BY H. S. SAUNDERS —

Our aim was to tell you of the efforts of our members, to do an elevator for next year's business. Would it not be an excellent idea, for each local union to make a special effort to get all its members together at the next regular meeting, make elevators the main subject to talk about and to elect one elevator to committee, set as soon as possible?

Thinking of the M. & O. and the N. C. & St. L. Rys. I am sure, that we can save much money to build both these roads in one year. But in the meantime, what shall we do with our grain? There has been a great deal of discussion, about the expediency of storing wheat in grain elevators and mercantile elevators. But I think this year's experience has been clearly in favor of elevators. The wheat reached one dollar, we were all ready to sell. But the season was so late that few could spare teams and hands to haul their wheat to market. Those who had their wheat in the elevators had no hauling to do, but sold at a profit of 13 to 15 cts per bushel after paying all expenses for insurance and storage.

Wheat in elevators had sustained no loss from shrinkage, or waste and was really in better condition than when stored. Wheat which was worth 72 cts. at threshing time sold at 90 to 93 cts., netting 85 cts. This was a clean profit of 13 cts. or 18 per cent on the investment. I know that there is a claim that wheat in mercantile elevators is a part of the visible supply, and this may be true, but if it does become a part of this visible supply, it still belongs to the farmer, and he has it stored just where he can sell at a moment's warning whenever the price suits. But suppose his wheat is at home in the garner. He has all the trouble with rats, mice, wastage, leakage, mold, weevil and etc., and his wheat is still to haul off when the price comes.

Then perhaps the roads are bad, or the teams and hands all busy, or the cars short or something else, in the way so that the price tumbles before we can get our wheat to market. True, we aim some day to make the price uniform, but that will be when we are thoroughly organized.

But the question is, what shall we do until we are organized? If we can erect or rent good elevators, by all means, let us do so. But if we cannot secure our own, let us store in the mercantile elevators until we can secure our own. In the Revolutionary war, we were not strong enough to gain our independence, but we secured the co-operation of Spain, Holland and France, and by their aid we gained our freedom.

By the time of 1812, we were able to defend ourselves against Great Britain, and she has never cared to try to whip us since. If farmers can clear 18 cents by holding wheat in mercantile elevators, we shall soon be able to erect our own. True, we may not be able to do this every year, but if we can make only six per cent, it will be no bad investment.

I know some young men will claim that they can make more than 18 per cent by trading in horses, cattle, sheep or hogs, therefore they will dump their wheat on the market in order to get money to trade on. In fact, some have already sold their crop of wheat at 90 cts. and expect to make up by trading what they lose in price. But this trading is really much more uncertain than holding farm products for better prices.

They may make 18 per cent, or they may lose 20 per cent. Besides, every bushel of wheat dumped on the market injures not only the dumper but all other farmers, while every bushel held off the market, aids not only the holder, but every farmer in the country. Besides all this, if we will erect or rent our own elevators the A. S. of E. will advance money on elevator receipts for produce deposited.

Already many tobacco growers are receiving more in advance on their tobacco than they could sell the whole crop for before the tobacco growers organized. The same will be true of wheat when we build our own elevators and pledge 50 to 75 per cent of the crop.

Since writing the above, I learn that some of my neighbors have sold their new crop of wheat for one dollar. Up-to-date says, "The popular question now asked us is, 'What price will the A. S. of E. set on the 1907 wheat crop?' We suppose this query is inspired by an inclination on the part of some, who have 1906 wheat, to hold for a higher price and by others to know whether it is worth while to pledge their crop.

We always answer that it is uncertain. The Society does not indulge in speculative price-making. When we measure or calculate the 1907 crop, it will be time enough to decide the price. It is clear, however, that the crop will be shorter than last year, hence the price will be over $1.00.

But we do advise these having 1906 wheat to sell it on the basis of a dollar and we also advise every grower to pledge his crop. Only through sufficient pledging can the price be compelled from harvest to harvest, for the first of the crop as well as the last. Every crop, except cattle, is now selling at or above the minimum prices set last October at the annual meeting. (See the table) Think of the victory. Spread the news all over the land and to all the farmers, and tell them that only two important crops failed to sell to the prices since the new system of marketing was taught.

Tell them these things so they will be business men and quit dumping at last." So you see that Pres. Everett still teaches what he has always taught. Do not hold for high or speculative prices, but only for fair prices. Last year the farmers met and said $1.00 was a fair price. When they meet again they will decide a fair price for 1907.

An Interesting Relic.

An object of historic interest on the barbecue ground at Lexington during the recent Tobacco Grower's Rally was the big seven hundred gallon iron kettle in which part of the burgoo was cooked. This kettle was cast at Pittsburgh in 1805 for Neil McCoy, grandfather of Judge James H. Mulligan, who had a powder mill west of North Broadway, where the ball park now is, says a Lexington exchange. Mr. McCoy manufactured there powder for the early settlers of Kentucky and the West. In this kettle was made a large part of the powder used by General Andrew Jackson at the battle of New Orleans, January 15, 1815. This powder was shipped down the Kentucky, Ohio and Mississippi to Jackson's army. The cannon balls which this powder hurled into the ranks of Pakenham's veterans, who came fresh from the Peninsular campaign to meet defeat at the hands of the untrained Western riflemen, were cast at iron works in Bath county and floated down the Licking, Ohio and Mississippi to New Orleans. This old kettle was loaned by Judge Mulligan to Gus Jaubert about fifteen years ago, and in it he has prepared the toothsome burgoo for barbecues in a number of States, among them Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Tennessee, Nebraska, Mississippi and others. —Shelby Sentinel.

The Fulton Sensation.

The Fulton sensation was extracted from a sensational account of the sensation that was created at the Fulton Hotel.

It was announced that Hawley had been in the Presbyterian parsonage for almost two years and during that time he roomed in the Meadows hotel. It was further stated that the frequency of visits to the parsonage and the Meadows hotel had been the cause of the Fulton sensation.

It was further stated that the Fulton sensation was the result of the fact that Hawley had been in the Meadows hotel for a long time and that the Meadows hotel was the only place where he could be found.

hang him but was going to use the cow hide. Rumor has it that the cow hide was used with telling effect for some minutes; that Hawley was then given a chance to explain, if he could, why he had broken up this happy home, and that he said that he had no explanation to make, other than he did not intend to do it in the beginning, but that they were getting in deeper and finally the only way out of it was for her to sue for a divorce and they get married and go to some foreign field to do missionary work. It is said that at this juncture in the story the cow hide again sang its delightful tune to the onlookers.

Again Rev. Hawley was given a breathing spell and time to talk. He said that three families or rather the wives of three men, in the very beginning had aided and assisted Mrs. Meadows and himself in every way possible to carry on their clandestine love affairs by allowing them the use of their homes. He was not tied nor handcuffed, but simply told by determined men that he was to be most soundly thrashed, and it is reported that he said time and again that he deserved to be killed for what he did. He told of the great number of letters Mrs. Meadows had written him during the past two weeks, and of the great number he had written to her. At this juncture he is said to have given Mr. Meadows two letters he had received from her just to prove that he was telling the truth, and he said that he came in response to the last letter he had received from her. It is said that Mr. Meadows asked Hawley if he would keep his feet off Kentucky and Tennessee soil and he said he could, and when asked where he would go, he said "to Arkansas." But Meadows declared that Arkansas was entirely too close; that he could smell the foul scent from even there, and that he would have to "ship on."

At the conclusion of the ceremonies it is said that Hawley was put in a surrey and driven south to the little station of Harris with explicit directions to take the first train that stopped at that station and keep going, and never to return to this part of the country. It is said that Hawley readily agreed to this.

After the affair was over and Hawley had dressed up again he went off by himself and wrote out the entire story of his clandestine love affair with Mrs. Meadows. He then signed it and delivered it to Mr. Meadows and told him he had given the facts as he then remembered them, from beginning to end, with out reserve.

Hawley is a young man, of collegiate education; has adopted the ministry as a calling and went into this home as a gentleman of superior office and was treated as such. During the past two years Mr. Meadows has been away from his health and it was during this forced absence Hawley wrecked his home and life, and who is there in this town or else where that loves home happiness, peace and security, who loves his family and his good name that would not have done as Mr. Meadows did?

Ninety-five per cent would have used the shot gun. Mr. Meadows used the raw hide.

It is further said that the great batch of love letters turned over by Hawley sustained the statement.

Public sentiment fully sustains Mr. Meadows in what he did, if it is a fact that he cow-hided Hawley.

Attempted Suicide.

A Mr. Griffith, who lives in West Hickman, was seen to act very suspiciously about four o'clock Sunday morning last, as if he were going to try to drown himself in a pond of water near the oil mill. Afterwards he started towards the river through the grounds of the Mengel factory.

Asked where he was going he said he did not know. He was followed by two gentlemen, who saw him go to an old cottonwood tree and hide his hat under the roots where the dirt had been washed away, then to the river bank, and walking out on a piece of timber, plunged in.

The two gentlemen who were watching him dragged him out, and asked him where he wanted them to take him. He said he did not know; he was asked where his hat was and said he did not know but went directly to it and got it. He is said to be of a weak mind, and that he made an attempt once before to end his life with a knife but was restrained.

He said he was sorry he was not permitted to accomplish his purpose.

A Rare Offer—Read It.

On the top of the first page of this issue of the Courier we are making a remarkable offer and it interests all our subscribers and those who are not but ought to be subscribers. As a special inducement to collect some of the money that is due us on subscription and as a further inducement to secure all the new subscribers we can in a short time, we are making this proposition: Every person who pays us on subscription enough to pay his subscription a year in advance, he may pay at the rate of 75 cents for every dollar, that is he may deduct 25 cents from every dollar he owes us. If you owe us two dollars you may pay us $1.50 instead of $2. This same offer holds good for new subscribers; the offer stands good until July 15, 1907, not a day later, and until that time we will accept new subscribers at 75 cents a year. We wish you to remember however, that after the first year has expired subscriptions must be renewed at our regular rate, $1 a year.

Here are some 'snaps' and all will pay big interest on the investment.

—Already Europe has met the timber famine and the high price of steel and iron by building its cities of concrete. The modern parts of Milan, Berlin, Budapest and other cities growing at a tremendous rate are being constructed of concrete.

One of the finest bridges in this country has just been completed at a great cost across the Rock Creek ravine at the national capital. There is not a bit of iron in the whole gigantic structure. It was constructed of concrete blocks, and they were made out of gravel gathered from the bed of the gorge.

A new machine for making these building blocks of concrete has just been perfected which will enable three men to turn out 600 blocks of almost any desired size in a day. A downward motion of the press lever applies 50,000 pounds pressure to the moist material.

The importance of the use of concrete is that the supply is inexhaustible, and many contractors are convinced that this manufactured stone will prove as durable as granite.

The practicability of substituting this artificial stone for steel and wood is sufficiently reassuring so far as the problem of the future housing of mankind is considered. It does not minimize the danger of destroying the forests on the watersheds. These woods that formerly so filtered the snows and rains that floods were averted in the valleys should receive national support.
